Rebels Fight Well.

Rebels Fight Well.

Friday's battle at kilometer 10 was a splendid exhibition of gameness and pluck on the part of the rebel forces. Although they were outnumbered two to one by the trained force of imperialists in front of them and were subjected from the flank to a raking cross fire from admiral Sah's warships, they held their ground until nearly 500 had been killed and 1500 wounded.

At last they were compelled to retire. Their ranks were broken, but there was no partic.

there was no parie:
The advance of the loyalists was a splendid justification of the training which these northern traops have received recently under European instruction. Ten thousand strong, they crossed into the rebel territory during the night and attacked the entrenched revolutionary forces at daybreak Friday.

Guna of Fleet Win Day. There were about 5000 of the rebel troops. These were behind well planned fortifications and had little to fear from the attacks of the troops. It was the guns of admiral Sah's fleet which finally decided the day against them. Sah's eight vessels approached the rebel positions soon after the advance of the imperial troops began to fire. After a little while the eight ships silently retired, as if they had decided not to participate in the engagement. Later they returned, this time ready for business.

The range was short and the gunners merdiently poured in their shells on the rear of the rebel positions. The shaughter was appailing. The rebel batteries replied ineffectually and were finally silenced. The gunboats drew still nearer and the revolutionists were compelled to retire.

The loyalists, whose losses had been slight, sitranced on the abandoned trenches in splendid order under cover of the batteries, capturing 15 field guns and taking 50 republican prisoners.

eager school boys. Incy attacked loyalists vigorously, but the first was one sided.

The trained imperial soldiers raked the armed rabble in front of them with their rapid fire guns and modern rifles. The rebeis held their ground gamely, but were ultimately compelled to withdraw. They sayed their field guns and carried off their wounded. Admiral Sah and his ships did not participate in the afternoon engagement.

During the retreat through Hankow many stray shots found their way into the foreign concessions. One Chinaman was killed in the French concession and the American, Kepler, was seriously wounded.

The Red Cross hospitals here are packed today with the wounded soldiers and arrangements for extra accommedations are being made.
